専門性を架橋するためのソフトスキルとは？

大学や職場でのケーススタディとともにチームや組織の一員として他者との適切な関係をいかに築くかということについても考えます。

This lecture aims to explore the applicability that soft skills management can find in the field of education and work environment. At first, the different types of skills will be identified. They will be placed in context in regards to the university environment and workforce environment. All them will be needed to contribute success in areas such as education and prospect career development. The unlimited connection between soft skills and disciplines (teacher, engineer, doctor, etc.) come from this approach that highlights the boundaries of a right relationship-building.

But the scope of this lecture does not stand just in the soft skills framework by itself. The second part of the lecture will explore the benefits of providing the students a study-case approach to lead their learning experience and applicability.
