

Deconstructing “Diversity” in Norwegian Academia

What kind of society do you imagine when you think of a diverse society? Diversity is an abstract concept. While there is an ideal of diversity and inclusion that leaves no one behind, when it comes to the planning and implementation of specific measures, there may be cases where the target group is limited. Depending on which social space you are considering - community, workplace, school, etc. - who is included and who is excluded may differ. This seminar focuses on Norwegian universities and discusses the definition of diversity.

Martine Sletten

マルティヌ・スレッテン

PhD Candidate, Norwegian University of Science and Technology

6 Nov. 2024 wed. 9:30-10:30

Open to the Public (admission free)

Online: Zoom meeting (with English-Japanese consecutive interpreting)

Registration form

【Organizer】 Institute for Gendered Innovations, SIP Project and NTNU- Ochanomizu Project

【Inquiry】 SIP Project Office ocha-sip3@cc.ocha.ac.jp