

Clinical Studies in Grieg Academy Music Therapy Research Center —Based on the Tradition of Culture-centered Music Therapy—

Rika (Ikuno) Yamamoto

From November 28th to December 8th, 2011, the author participated in the Grieg Research School for Interdisciplinary Music Studies in Bergen University, Norway. The purposes of the visit were, 1) to present a part of the doctoral research on “relationship and meaning on music therapy clinical process, ” 2) to consult with the researchers at Grieg Academy Music Therapy Research Center, and 3) to observe the clinical sites for children. It was greatly influential for the author's project, to experience the Center's new integrative actions for the process-oriented research, based on the traditions of culture-centered music therapy and the qualitative research.
